

PHILIPPE BOVET

Philippe Bovet is a bilingual actor, director and all around storyteller born in Montreal, Philippe started his artistic training in an intensive theater program at the age of 12 in a school dedicated to fine arts F.A.C.E.

He then went on to study acting at the Carter Thor Acting Studios in Montreal, after attending as student Philippe was asked to become a coach in the studio himself, after working as an acting coach both privately for plays, movies and with different acting studios He has since gone on to co-found A Class Act Intensive a program dedicated to help dancers around the world become better storytellers using every element of the performing arts.

As an actor he has worked on numerous productions from Hollywood blockbusters like X-Men and The Death and Life of John F. Donovan to award winning independent short film and TV shows. His work as a director includes award winning short and medium length films and documentaries, he has also worked on multiple commercial projects with well established brands such as lululemon, McDonalds, Converse and many more. He is also a published photographer and an accomplished painter.